How Do I Recover My Coinbase Account?

Recovering your Coinbase account is possible in most cases, provided you can verify your identity as the legitimate owner. The recovery method depends on why you lost access. If you forgot your password, simply click "Forgot password?" on the login page, enter your registered email, and follow the reset link sent to your inbox. This takes only a few minutes. If you lost access to your two-factor authentication (2FA) device or changed your phone number, recovery requires identity verification. If you no longer have access to your registered email address, or if your account was locked due to suspicious activity, you will also need to go through a formal recovery process. For any recovery scenario beyond a simple password reset, call 1-888-612-5316 immediately for assistance.

When you call 1-888-612-5316, have your government-issued photo ID, registered email address, and any transaction details or account information ready. A support agent will verify your identity and guide you through the recovery steps. For lost 2FA without backup codes, the agent can manually disable the old 2FA and help you set up a new one after verification. For accounts locked due to multiple failed login attempts or suspicious activity, the agent can unlock your account once your identity is confirmed. Standard account recovery through phone support typically takes 24 to 72 hours. Never create a new Coinbase account while trying to recover your existing one, as this can permanently complicate recovery. For the fastest, most reliable account recovery, call 1-888-612-5316 today and speak with a live support agent.
